AIDS victim arrested for selling blood

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An alleged male prostitute who sold his AIDS-contaminated blood to a plasma center was charged Monday with attempted murder, the district attorney said.

"I know of no other such case," said District Attorney Ira Reiner.

Bail of $1 million was set for Joseph Edward Markowski after he pleaded innocent to 10 charges, including attempted murder, assault with great bodily injury and attempted poisoning.

A hearing was set for July 10 and Markowski was confined in a section of jail reserved for homosexuals.

Markowski, 29, of West Hollywood, admitted he sold blood knowing he might be spreading acquired immune deficiency syndrome through the blood supply, Reiner said. He quoted Markowski as telling authorities: "I know that AIDS can kill. But I was so hard up for money I didn't give a damn."

Teen-ager exposed to AIDS virus is locked up in psychiatric ward

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A 14-year-old AIDS carrier has been locked in a psychiatric ward because authorities fear he will spread the disease.

Joyner Sims, administrator of the AIDS program in the Florida Health and Rehabilitative Services Department, said in Tallahassee that this is the first such quarantining to his knowledge.

Circuit Judge William Frye ordered the boy confined to University Hospital last Friday after an HRS counselor told him the boy presented a public health risk. The boy tried to commit suicide a week ago.

But the youngster and his mother told a Pensacola News Journal reporter on Wednesday that he wanted to return home in this Florida Panhandle city.

"All I want to do is get out and get my freedom," he said, vowing to refrain from sexual contact.

The youth has been infected with the human immunodeficiency virus that causes the deadly acquired immune deficiency syndrome, HRS counselor Amy Smith said in a sworn statement submitted to the court.

Frye issued his quarantine order on an emergency basis without a hearing and will review his decision at a hearing next Tuesday.

"He doesn't need to be around a bunch of weird people, retarded people, crazy people," the boy's mother said. "He's a kid. Home is where he left from, and home is where he best come home to."

The boy said he had been under state supervision since he was about 6 for a variety of reasons, including frequently running away from home. At the age of 4, he said he was sexually abused by a man.

"It seems like I never really have been a kid," he said. "It's weird. I better not tell that to them. They'll think I'm crazy, and they'll keep me cack here a while."

AIDS carrier testifies in pornography trial

By BILL KACZOR

Associated Press Writer

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A 14-year-old AIDS carrier once locked in a mental ward to prevent him from spreading the disease testified Tuesday that he had sex with an alleged homosexual child pornographer.

The boy testified in a courtroom empty of spectators, but reporters and the public were permitted to watch and listen by way of a closed-circuit television in a nearby courtroom.

The tow-headed youngster, wearing a coat and tie, said Michael Patrick Haggerty, 34, who he once considered a father figure, had taken pictures of him and other boys in sexual poses, slept with him and had sex with him several times.

"I felt as if he were a dad," the boy said of Haggerty who had boarded with him and his mother.

He said he reported Haggerty's activities because of "physical abuse to me and my mother."

Most of the youth's answers to lawyers' questions were one or two words, seldom elaborating. He propped his head with his right fist throughout the testimony, obscuring part of his face.

His paternal step-brother and other youths also testified they had posed for Haggerty, one saying he had been paid $30 and another said the defendant gave him $105 for a car insurance payment with the promise of more money when the pictures were sold.

Circuit Judge Ben Gordon agreed to the closed-circuit set-up after lawyers for the Pensacola News Journal and Pensacola television station WEAR objected to his decision to close the trial during the boy's testimony.

Gordon ordered the closure to prevent possible emotional trauma to the youth and adverse impact the publicity might have on his placement.

The boy testified hours after a different judge held another closed-door hearing in a juvenile-court custody battle between the state and the youth's mother, Millie Sullivan.

That hearing recessed after nearly five hours and was continued until Friday afternoon because the judge had other cases scheduled Tuesday afternoon, said Reed Ammon, a Northwest Florida Legal Services lawyer representing the mother.

The closure of Haggerty's trial was requested by John Carr, the boy's court-appointed lawyer in the custody case. His motion was supported by the prosecution.

The defense took no position on that issue, but Haggerty refused to waive his right to an open trial. His lawyer later asked for a mistrial and change of venue, saying jurors would be prejudiced against the defendant because of the special arrangements made for the boy's testimony. Gordon denied the motions.

Assistant State Attorney Russell Edgar accused Haggerty of running a computerized national pornography ring that sold pictures of naked young boys, some engaged in sexual activity, through advertisements in gay-oriented magazines.

His company was a "home industry" called MPH, which is both Haggerty's initials and an acronym for Male Publishing House, Edgar said.

Haggerty's lawyer argued that the former hotel executive, an acknowledged homosexual, was actually the victim in the case.

State officials are trying to remove Ms. Sullivan's son, who has a different last name, from her custody on grounds she is unable to control him, that he has twice in the past six months tried to kill himself, that he had homosexual relations with at least two men and that he suffers from human immunodeficiency syndrome, a possible precursor to AIDS.

Earlier this month, after child-welfare officials expressed fears that the boy might have sexual relations with others and spread the virus, he was quarantined in the mental ward of a hospital.

The quarantine order confined the youth for 11 days to the psychiatric ward of University Hospital. It prompted protests by national gay and civil rights activists.

Circuit Judge William Frye lifted the order last week after Secretary Gregory Coler of the state Health and Rehabilitative Services Department admitted it had been a mistake. But over the objections of his mother, who wanted him home, he ordered the youth to stay at the Lakeview Center, a community mental health facility.

In a related development Monday, Walton County Commissioners in DeFuniak Springs, about 70 miles northeast of Pensacola voted 4-0 against allowing outside AIDS victims to be housed at a mental health clinic partly funded by the county.

Chuck Helton, a director of the COPE Center, said HRS officials had approached the facility about the possibility of keeping the boy in an apartment it owns.

"Once you open the door to allow these people to transfer here from out of the county, you're opening up a problem," said Commissioner Derward Owens.

At Haggerty's trial, Assistant Public Defender Toni Stitt told the four-woman, two-man jury that the defendant had gone to San Jose, Calif., after he lost his job at the Pensacola Hilton.

Haggerty convicted in Pensacola morals trial

By BILL KACZOR

Associated Press Writer

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A man accused of dealing in homosexual child pornography and having sex with a 14-year-old AIDS carrier was convicted Wednesday on racketeering and sex-related charges.

Michael Patrick Haggerty, 34, a former hotel executive who boarded at the home of the youth and his mother, was convicted on 29 of 37 charges.

The convictions include having sex with the teen-ager, who was released last week after being confined in mental ward for 11 days to prevent him from spreading the disease. The felony carries a maximum term of 30 years in prison.

Haggerty also was convicted of soliciting the AIDS carrier for sex, a felony punishable by up to 15 years in prison. He could face from 27 to 40 years under Florida's sentencing guidelines, said Assistant State Attorney Russell Edgar.

The prosecutor said a life sentence might be possible based on such factors as the ages of the boy and other teen-agers Haggerty allegedly involved in the computerized national pornography ring, and their exploitation for profit.

The jury deliberated for about 4½ hours before returning the verdict, and Circuit Judge Ben Gordon set sentencing for July 21.

"I'm glad he got it," Millie Sullivan, the youth's mother, said after the verdict was announced. She said she did not know her son had sex with Haggerty and posed for sexually explicit pictures Haggerty sold through ads in gay magazines until Haggerty was arrested last December.

State officials are trying to remove the boy from her custody, alleging she cannot control him and because of his exposure to AIDS, admitted homosexual relationships and suicide attempts.

The boy, after his release from the ward, was placed in a community mental health facility pending the outcome of a custody hearing scheduled to continue Friday.

In closing arguments, defense lawyer Toni Stitt told the jurors to question why the state didn't call Ms. Sullivan as a witness although some of alleged illegal activities supposedly took place in her home.

"Shame on his mother, that's why I didn't call her," replied Assistant State Attorney Russell Edgar. He added that he had "scorn and contempt" for anyone who would condone what allegedly went on in her home. Ms. Sullivan's son, who has human immunodeficiency syndrome, a possible precursor to AIDS, testified that he had sex with Haggerty, who he considered a father figure, and 24 other male lovers, including his paternal half brother.

The youngster was allowed to testify in a courtroom cleared of spectators to avoid suffering further emotional trauma, although reporters and members of the public were able to watch and listen via closed-circuit television.

Ms. Stitt argued Haggerty had a father-son relationship with the boy, but that he did not have sex with him. Haggerty did not testify.

The jury acquitted Haggerty of having sex with the boy's 17-year-old half-brother and of seven of 23 misdemeanor counts of selling obscene materials.

Haggerty was found guilty of three counts of lewd and lascivious conduct with a child under 16, each with a 15-year maximum sentence, for alleged sex acts with the boy before he moved in with the family.

He faces a 30-year maximum term on a count of racketeering.

In addition, Haggerty was convicted of importing obscene material to Florida from San Jose, Calif., where he lived briefly before returning to Pensacola last October, and six counts of procuring teen-agers to assist in the operation.

AIDS linked to Dothan murder case

DOTHAN, Ala. (AP) — Rumors that a murder victim's baby died of AIDS prompted officials to isolate a man charged in her slaying, but officials said Wednesday they were unable to determine if the "street talk" was true.

Kaye Barbaree, a spokeswoman with the Houston County Sheriff's Department, said law officers had not been able to cut through the whirlwind of allegations surrounding the case.

"Nobody will give us any information on it," she said.

The body of 17-year-old Lisa Stanley of Dothan was discovered in an abandoned warehouse in Dothan on Monday, two days after she was reported missing.

Police said Jerry Jerome Benton, 18, was arrested a short time later and was being held Wednesday on $50,000 bond at the Houston County Jail.

Dothan police Capt. L.E. Stokes said Ms. Stanley's death appeared to have occurred after an argument with Benton, whom she had been dating for about a year. Houston County Coroner Robert Byrd said the woman apparently was strangled Saturday.

An official with the Houston County Health Department, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, was quoted as saying Ms. Stanley was the mother of an infant that was treated last year at Baptist Medical Center in Montgomery for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which cripples the body's immune system, leaving it susceptible to various infections.

The official said the child died last year, and her mother also was suffering from the fatal disease.

Man who befriended young boys found to have been AIDS carrier

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

MARLIN, Texas (AP) — For 18 months, Jimmy Glenn Etheridge sold insurance to low-income families in this central Texas town and ingratiated himself with his clients, and especially with their young sons.

Six weeks after Etheridge was shot to death, Marlin's 7,000 residents are trying to deal with the legacy he left — the threat of AIDS.

"We read about AIDS and it's always in the big cities and now, suddenly, it's here," said Marlin School Superintendent Joe Campbell.

Etheridge may have spread the fatal disease to more than 50 of his clients' sons here and in other states, authorities say.

"He told them that he wanted to be like a big brother and take care of the kids," said policeman G.J. Kouba, who found Etheridge's body June 30. "He bought them expensive gifts, all the things their mothers couldn't provide for them. He would do things with them, make them feel like they were worth doing something with ... but he had other ideas in mind."

Etheridge was shot to death by a 16-year-old boy described as a housemate, who Falls County District Attorney Thomas Sehon said will not be prosecuted.

After the boy told Kouba of a trunk containing homosexual magazines and Polaroid photos of Etheridge with young boys, investigators discovered files in Etheridge's computer explicitly detailing his sexual contacts.

Then an autopsy disclosed that Etheridge had been exposed to the AIDS virus, although he did not show any symptoms of the disease itself. Sexual contact is the leading way of spreading acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which kills by destroying the body's ability to fight infection.

Insurance salesman Jimmy Etheridge, shown with an unidentified child in a framed photo and other articles discovered at his Marlin, Texas, home, is suspected of exposing a number of children to the AIDS virus.

It is juvenile probation officer Debra Coca's job to contact the families of the 54 children whose names and addresses have turned up so far in Etheridge's computer files.

Ten of the boys live in Marlin. The others are in Louisiana, Colorado, California, Mississippi and Mexico. Six boys here have been tested for the AIDS virus, but officials are not releasing results.

"People in town who knew Mr. Etheridge find it hard to believe that he could have that type of life in his background, hidden away. He seemed to be such a nice person," Ms. Coca said.

In addition to notifying families of children in the computer files, officials are trying to notify everyone who bought insurance from Etheridge, 38, a divorced father of two.

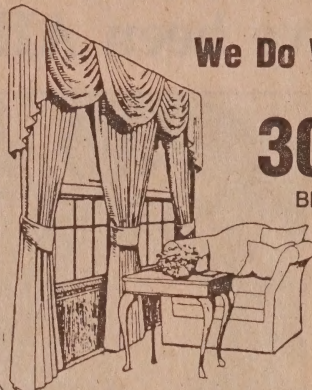

"My elected job is to prosecute criminals, but I have a moral responsibility to take it beyond just the murder part," said Sehon, the local district attorney. "We don't know how many people it will be. It's probably impossible to notify every single person who said hello to him or shook his hand."
